One Month of NEW

A Big Group
Of People Is Called A Nope.

MADISON  ACADEMY

Just four weeks ago, we embarked on a NEW school year. It was "new" in many ways... new protocols, new challenges, new technology, new systems. New is scary. New is risky. New is overwhelming. AND, new is filled with opportunity!

Now, just one month in, it is clear that the Madison Academy family is choosing to EMBRACE what is new. We now know how to socially distance, when to wear a mask, where the hand sanitizer is located, what to do in case of a tornado, and who to ask for help on just about every topic. We've got this!

Is it perfect? No. Are there challenges? Yes. Could it all fall apart tomorrow? Mercy, I hope not. Do we have improvements to make? Of course. But, for today, we are rejoicing in the knowledge that one month into the NEW year, we are (1) engaging synchronously with both on campus and virtual students, (2) learning from some rock-solid teachers who are committed to being great, and (3) choosing safe measures that are proving to keep us healthy.

Thank you for embracing the NEW with us. The MA Team of Master Educators talk daily about how to approach the NEW in creative, hope-filled, solution-oriented ways. We welcome your ideas.

Sounds Generous!

Our classroom experience keeps improving!! In July, our teachers were introduced to their new mobile command centers, software platforms on the Knight Network, and programs that enhance instruction and improve learning. Then, like every new endeavor, a challenge in our synchronous plan became evident: hearing! Students could hear the teacher, but class discussion was limited.

Not to worry. Classrooms now have sound bars the project the virtual students voices into the room. Next week, special omnidirectional microphones will be installed in the ceilings so that virtual students can hear the entire conversation happening anywhere in the classroom.

We again express boundless thanks to the individuals who make great education possible! We are able to provide quality synchronous education through the gifts of generous donors who value learning and believe in growing the Kingdom of God.
